Title in red within woodcut border. 35 woodcuts, 26 of which are full-page illustrations with elaborate border designs of children, birds, flowers, etc. Three of the cuts occur twice.
The illustrations have been variously attributed to Hans Burgkmair and to a "pseudo-Burgkmair," identified by Röttinger as Hans Weiditz. The entire series was published by G. Hirth, 1887 (2d edition 1908) under title, "H. Burgkmair's Leben und leiden Christi," as vol. xi of his "Liebhaber-bibliothek alter illustratoren." cf. H. Röttinger, Hans Weiditz, 1904, no. 25.
The illustrations in the L. C. copy have been crudely colored.
A German edition of the Meditationes was issued by the same publishers in 1521 under title: Gebet vnd betrachtungeo des Lebens des mitlers gotes, vnd des menschen vnsers herrens Jesu christi.
Probably the work of which 5 undated editions are described in Hain-Copinger, no. 10691-10695.

The volumes of music known as the Trienter codices were compiled in the fifteenth century, probably for the library of the Duomo at Trent, where six of them were found and described about 1885. These six volumes (Cod. 87–92, containing 1585 compositions) were bought in 1891 by the Austrian Ministerium für cultus und unterricht, and were deposited in the Hofbibliothek (now the Nationalbibliothek) at Vienna. In 1920, under the terms of the Treaty of St. Germain, they were returned to Trent. The seventh codex (Codex Tridentinus 93, nos. 1586–1684) was found in the archives of the Duomo at Trent in 1920. The manuscripts were written by Johannes Wiser and other scribes.
Latin, French, German, or Italian texts.
